Greetings!

I have been praying for several years now for wet eyes and a broken heart. Recently I have found myself up in the middle of the night weeping. Often during the day I find myself filled with grief that is so heavy that my eyes tear up and my mouth just sighs, "Oh God". As I sat on my bed weeping one night I asked myself, "Why am I crying?" these things came to mind:

People are blindly stumbling into hell.
People are too ignorant to weep for themselves.
Churches are falling into apostasy.
Compromise fills our pulpits.
Human suffering will be great during God's judgment.
My grandchildren will not know the America I have known.

I'm not complaining, I embrace this burden that I believe the Lord has placed on me. It has moved me to a deeper life of prayer. I am actually encouraged by these tears. I have been reading, Revival Lectures by Charles Finney. He mentions that God will often pour out a spirit of prayer on His people before He moves among them.

Will you join me in praying for this burden that we might feel some of what Christ feels? The Holy Spirit is looking for yielded servants who He can weep through.

Good News

Rick Walmark will be joining us in January to serve as our worship leader.

We also had our largest offering of over $6,200 for the month of November.

LifeKIDS

Hey LifeKIDS, the new series "Hit the Slopes" is about three friends who go on a ski trip for Christmas break. They learn to ski, learn about Christmas, and learn about how to put their faith into action and grow as a follower of Christ.

Kathleen Carnali Christmas Concert

CRBC invites you to join us in a Christmas Concert featuring Contemporary Christian artist Kathleen Carnali.

Coming in January
